Free specialist energy saving advice available to residents to counter the impact of rising energy prices

Your local energy experts - the Green Doctors - are offering eligible residents a free home energy consultation (could be via a telephone call or a home visit) to help you maintain a healthy, comfortable home and save money on your energy bills.

During the energy consultation, Green Doctors will advise the individual about saving energy through installing energy efficiency measures, accessing grants and further support. Physical efficiency changes to your home will particularly help in the current circumstances.

Likewise, for those with energy debt from last winter, Green Doctors may be able to help reduce what is owed, further alleviating financial pressure during this time of unprecedented energy prices.

The support is available for a wide range of people, including those who are on a low income, living with debt, have poor housing conditions or those who live with a physical or mental health condition.

Smart meters record how much electricity or gas you use – just like your existing meters. But with a smart meter, your gas and electricity readings are sent directly and securely to your energy supplier. This means no more digging around in a cupboard or getting on a ladder to read the meter.

During the consultation the Green Doctor can share information about smart meters including how they allow you to see how much energy your using – and what it costs – on the in-home display. This could help take some of the guesswork out of balancing the household budget. The Green Doctor will also let you know how to request one.
